Directors of the Master:

Mercedes Díaz Rodríguez
Jaime Durán Navarro

General Coordinator of the Master:

Esther Puertas Cristóbal

Goals

To know the operation of microcredit programs in impoverished contexts.

To analyze the framework, instruments and agents of development cooperation and humanitarian action

To understand the tools involved in the international protection of Human Rights with special attention to vulnerable groups.

Microcredits are considered as a highly effective tool for economic and social development, human training and environmental sustainability, both in development cooperation projects and in local development projects.

The University, as a development agent, should promote development cooperation by offering new professional and international volunteer opportunities for people with prior preparation.

There is a great shortage of online training courses that specifically address this issue and link contents of the area of social and legal sciences with health areas.
